DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS AND UPBUILDING OF ALBANY-DECATUR, ALABAMA

ALBANY, ALABAMA, FRIDAY, JULY 31, 1925

NUMBER 129

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 31—Alabama: Fair tonight. Cooler in extreme south portions. Saturday fair.

RATE HEARING IS CALLED OFF

Government Said To Want Draw On This Side

SPAN ON SOUTHERN SIDE OF STREAM TO REQUIRE 'DREDGING'

Some See Probability That Dam No. 3 Will Be Completed

HIGH APPROACH WILL BE NEEDED

Roadway To Be Raised Fifteen Feet On Alabama Street

Recommendations that the draw span of the new Tennessee River bridge be located on this side of the river were declared today to have come from the government and in turn from the state highway commission. Belief is general that the new bridge on the part of the highway commission is due to the protest made by the Tennessee River Navigation company at the recent meeting held at Florence for the purpose of obtaining various viewpoints on the local situation.

Still another angle is seen to the move today by bridge leaders who declared that should the span be placed on this side of the river that there be one of two additional developments to take place. The government must build this side of the river, which according to details said to have been submitted by government engineers, is solid sheet of rock. The other necessary move is believed to be the building of Dam No. 3 near Wheeler station, Ala. In either event, leaders said the cities will benefit through the move for the dredging of the river means additional river traffic through here and vast expenditures by the government. Otherwise an immense appropriation will have to be made for the building of Dam No. 3 which at this time remains undetermined.

Another feature of the latest development is the need for an elevated approach to the structure. Placing of the span on this side of the river will necessarily mean that the cities will have to build a standard highway at a level of approximately 15 feet above the present approach, it is said his move will involve the expenditure of additional amounts by the cities in accordance with the agreement made with the highway department to build the approach of standard type and serviceable to those who will use the bridge upon completion. Pressure has been brought to bear, it is claimed, upon the government and highway commission in turn, by the Tennessee River Navigation company today were firm in the belief that the span will remain at the center of the structure while others maintained that the span will be placed where the government has recommended. All however were certain that the determination to place the span at any part of the bridge will not effect the construction of the project, it merely being a detail that is to be worked out.

Speake Talks Of Florida Prospect

"The man who says Florida has nothing to sell is wrong, the man who says people are not making money is wrong," said H. R. Speake, prominent Decatur merchant today on his return from that state after a visit of several days.

Asked of the future outlook Mr. Speake continued, "Yes, Florida is going to crack, it is a matter of time, and at that time money is going to be lost, but you cannot tell when that time is."

Mr. Speake declared he was able to see both sides of the issue Florida's good and bad points and that he was not thinking of leaving Albany-Decatur. Mr. Speake and family are visiting relatives and friends in Georgia.

Marjorie Vanderbilt's sister, Consuelo, is said to have renounced the love of Earl Smith, her Yale college boy admirer. Consuelo underwent an operation for appendicitis.

GEOLOGISTS STUDY CAVE-INS AT HOMES OF MAGIC CITY PEOPLE

Third Sinking Of Portions Of Yards Causes Alarm In Birmingham

(Associated Press) BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 31—Geologists and engineers are studying a series of earth indentations on the southside which have occurred during the past three days.

Wednesday the front yard of J. W. Brannan, 2402 Sixth avenue South, began to misbehave and a part sprang a hole 40 feet deep and ten feet across. This hole was still growing larger today.

Last night Mrs. J. E. Culberhouse and her niece, Miss Alice Hartley, were seated quietly at their home 4531 Fifth avenue South, and a part of the back yard suddenly sank for parts unknown, carrying down a garage, a coal house and a tree, the tops of which were sticking above the earth's surface today.

The third cave in in as many successive days was discovered Friday morning when Sidney Walker, negro, stepped from his back porch at 2314 Fourth avenue South to find that a hole 15 feet wide and ten feet deep, and still growing had come in between him and his back fence.

In the semi-darkness of the early morning he almost stepped into the hole. City forces moved today to call in expert advice in the matter and arranged with Dr. George I. Adams, professor of geology at the University of Alabama to come here for an inspection. Dr. Adams was expected to arrive from Tuscaloosa some time during the day.

Dr. Eugene Allen Smith, of the University, state geologist for more than 50 years said today that such sinkings as Birmingham was experiencing this week, characterized all limestone formations and that Jones Valley had frequent experiences like this in times past.

He referred especially to some trouble many years ago in the plant of a rolling mill which was a few hundred yards northeast of Alice furnace. There was a continual undermining and caving in, under the heavy rollers, until at last the particular spot was abandoned.

RIVER OVERFLOWS

SECRETARY WILBUR, with President Coolidge's approval, of course, will transfer the base of the Navy's rigid dirigibles, Los Angeles and Shenandoah from Lakehurst, New Jersey, to San Diego, California.

THERE are two good reasons. First, the climate of California offers the ideal all-year round climate for flying experiments. San Diego is to be the center of the nation's flying activities, and the greatest air base in the world.

Second, our fleet will remain more and more on the Pacific Coast. The Pacific ocean is the most important as well as the biggest body of water on earth.

Its control means to the nations now what control of the Mediterranean mean meant in the days of Carthage and old Rome, and the Atlantic ocean later.

A NEW WAGE idea comes from the coal miners of South Wales. They would pay a workman in proportion to the size of his family. Thus, if a man unmarried got five shillings, the married man would get one shilling additional and an extra allowance for the first, second, third and fourth children.

This suggestion comes not from a labor union, but from the men that own the coal mines in South Wales.

THEY are intelligent men, for the problem of modern industry and

FINAL EPISODE OF COLORFUL CAREER OF BRYAN ENACTED

Thousands Stand In the Rain to Pay Tribute to Beloved Commoner

FAMILY GATHERS FOR THE SERVICE

Birmingham Pastor To Say Benediction At Arlington Grave

(Associated Press) WASHINGTON, July 31.—In the half light of a drab sunless day, destiny today brought the final episode in the colorful earthly career of William Jennings Bryan.

The church held his body for yet a little time, for the simple service of the faith in which he lived and died. Then the government, which he served in war and in peace, claimed him for burial among the great company of the dead that sleep at Arlington. Gathered around his bier at last was a reunited family called from many distant parts of the land. The widow, who has borne so bravely this sorrow, heaped upon her own affliction, was joined early in the day by her only son, William J. Bryan, Jr., from Los Angeles, and another daughter, Mrs. Grace B. Hargreaves, of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Arriving here with the son and daughter, to complete the family circle from which the commoner parted so suddenly last Sunday, were Mr. Bryan's two sisters, Mrs. T. F. Allen and Mrs. J. W. Baird, of Lincoln, Neb.; P. Millson, of Lincoln, Mr. Bryan's nephew and Colonel P. W. O'Bannon, of Sperryville, Va., a cousin.

After the last of the thousands who moved with solemn tread through the New York avenue Presbyterian church for a last look upon the face of the crusader, had gone their way, a little span of time was set aside, so that the last of the members of the family to arrive here could visit the church and say farewell.

Mrs. Bryan, herself, decided not to join the circle. She preferred to preserve the memory of her companion of many crowded years, as he was in life and not in death. The near approach of the hour fixed for closing the portals of the sanctuary to all but his dear ones, saw no slackening of the procession of those who filed solemnly by, to look upon him in death.

From noon yesterday until late last night the throngs had come and gone in an unbroken line and from the moment the doors were open this morning, the sad march went sadly on. Many waited long in the soft rain outside for the privilege of a last tribute. Meanwhile the mound of floral offerings grew until it almost buried the little chancel in a bower of fragrance. Among them was a spray of roses from President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Mrs. Ruth Owens, a daughter of the commoner, went to the church ahead of the other members of the family, to arrange the floral pieces in preparation for the funeral.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the church and a long friend of the dead man, was chosen to conduct the religious service, and at the request of Mrs. Bryan, Dr. George R. Stuart, of Birmingham, Ala., was asked to say a benediction at the grave at Arlington.

TWO WEEKS TRUCE DECLARED IN MINES ON EVE OF STRIKE

Mine Owners Withdraw Notices, Averting Walkout

MEN CONTINUE AT THEIR TASKS

Full Inquiry to be Made By Government Of Whole Industry

(Associated Press) LONDON July 31—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin informed the house today that a provisional agreement had been reached in the coal industry and that the mine owners had withdrawn their notices for 2 weeks thus averting a country-wide strike which was called for midnight tonight.

The notices that have been withdrawn are those posted at the pit-heads informing the miners that new conditions would be effective at midnight tonight due to the inability to arrive at a new working agreement. These notices hurried the decision of the miners federation for the nation wide strike, called for the moment the old working agreement ended. It is assumed the miners will continue at their task under the present hours and wages with the government giving financial aid to the owners until a full inquiry of the mining industry has been completed.

The agreement which Baldwin announced is subject to confirmation in the various coal producing sections of the country. The executive of the miners federation has telegraphed to all local unions 'notices to strike suspended. Continue work.'

Collector Checks Cargo Of Liquor

(Associated Press)

MOBILE, Ala., July 31—Collector of Customs A. R. Noble left here today for Biloxi, Miss., to check the cargo of prohibited liquors on board the British schooner Wanderer, seized ten days ago off Chantelaur island. It was reported yesterday that part of the cargo was missing.

The collector wants to check the cargo personally.

Milton Hanged For Slaying Of Infant

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 31—John Milton, negro, was hanged in the jail yard here today for the murder of an infant who was slain when the man attempted to attack the mother. He protested his innocence until the trap was sprung.

Work Your Way Over The River Is Latest Vogue

Working your way over the ferry is the latest style adopted by motorists who desire to cross the stream, according to a local resident who had the misfortune to have to both work and pay his way across last night. He declared he didn't mind paying ferriage fees, but he did not relish working for and paying for at the same time.

Reason for this new system is given that the river is at such a low water mark that the ferry cannot pull out from the banks as is the usual custom, but must back out. Passengers were called upon last night, it was said, to get out and help push the boat off the bank.

Chenault and Callahan Return From Parley In Birmingham

SCHOOLS TO GET WATER SERVICE

Company Expects That Contract Will Be Fulfilled

Returning today from the Alabama Public Service Commission-Alabama Water company parley at Birmingham City Attorney's G. O. Chenault and W. W. Callahan both gave the opinion that the consumers of Albany-Decatur shall pay the water rates imposed by the Alabama Water company at the present time. It is believed that the Water company is going to be granted some raise in rate locally, but whether the corporation will be granted the full rate proposed is a question which will be worked out between the Public Service body and the corporation.

Though incorporated in the petition that the company should charge for water consumed by schools, representatives of the corporation are said to have stated in open meeting Thursday that the company will fulfill its contract and will not make charge for water consumed by the schools. Attorney Tennis Tidwell represented the schools at the meeting.

Many have been paying the present water rate under protest and it is believed likely that should the Public Service commission find that the rate has been fixed at a high point that some few cents will be returned to the average consumer. A great many protests on the rates, service and system have been received by both cities from individual citizens, but it is believed that the only plan to be adopted at this time is the payment of the advanced rate figure.

"We are going to have to pay it for a time," was the opinion of city attorneys, referring to the proposed parley between the corporation and the state commission. Attorney Chenault said today that at the end of the thirty day period if the commission and the water representatives had failed to reach an agreement that it is likely that another hearing will be held before the three judges at which time the case of the cities may be presented.

Speaking of the action of the courts attorneys declared that they submitted to the wish of the court rather than get at logger heads with the judicial body.

Dr. Greer Leaves For Special Work

Dr. H. D. Greer, well known local physician and surgeon, will leave tonight for Rochester and New York city, where he will spend a month doing special work in various clinics and hospitals in the United States. He will return home about September 1.

SHIP SALE LEGAL

Strange Tale Of Murder Revealed

(Associated Press) CHICAGO, July 31—A strange tale of murder, in which a wife paid $400 to have her husband slain, the hired assassin in turn employing another to do the shooting for $200 and the subsequent filching of the money from the slayer was unfolded at the detective bureau last night.

The widow of Louis Nobile, slain last December, said she had paid $400 to have her husband killed, claiming that he had abused her daughter by a former marriage. The daughter corroborated her story.

PRUDENCE'S DAUGHTER

By Ethel Hueston

SYNOPSIS PART ONE

CHAPTER I.—At a merry party in the studio apartment of Carter Blake, in New York, Jerry Harmer, Prudence's daughter, meets Duane, Allerton, a wealthy idler. He becomes slightly intoxicated, and Jerry, resenting his assumption of familiarity, leaves the party abruptly.

CHAPTER II.—The story turns to Jerry's childhood and youth at her home in Des Moines. Only child of a wealthy father, when she is twenty she feels the call of Art and her parents, with some misgivings, agree to her going to New York to study.

CHAPTER III.—In New York Jerry makes her home with a Mrs. Delaney ("Mimi"), an actress, who, with Theresa, a painter, occupies the house. Jerry takes an immediate liking to Theresa, and the two become fast friends.

All Over Alabama

The paving of the road from Sheffield to Wilson Dam in the near future is expected to result from a movement that has been launched by the civic clubs of Sheffield and Tusculum.

A movement is on foot at Andalusia for the re-establishment of a chamber of commerce for that city, as a result of the effort of several business men.

The R. O. T. C. unit from the Presbyterian college of South Carolina has been adjudged the best senior unit from any of the colleges that sent men to the camp, which was held at Camp McClellan.

The first bale of cotton reported for Alabama was sent to Montgomery from Abbeville last week. The cotton brought 32 1-2 cents a pound.

A $40,000 brick building will be erected in Montgomery in the near future it has been announced.

THE SILENTO-STENOGRAPHER

Only Twenty Days Training Required To Do The Work of a Stenographer.

Teachers At Good Salaries Wanted For New Schools.

The University of Silentophoning will open at Decatur, Alabama, August 10, 1925, to teach a new system, which qualifies one to do the work of an efficient stenographer in twenty days without the use of shorthand. This should be good news to those who anticipate taking up the work of a stenographer on account of the short time required to learn the system. It will do away with the long, weary months of shorthand study to be a stenographer, and the great expense.

The President of the University, Mr. William Orr, is the Official Court Reporter of Morgan, Madison, Cullman and Limestone counties, Alabama, under Judge Oecola Kyle, of Decatur, and uses the Silentophone system to report all law suits, court charges, and speeches to the exclusion of shorthand. Mr. Orr will personally instruct the August class.

No shorthand system has ever been devised as inexpensive and which may be learned in so short a time as the Silentophone system.

It is our purpose to select from the August Graduating Class several teachers for contemplated schools. This is the first of a chain of universities we expect to establish in cities where five pupils may be obtained. Each of these teachers will be paid a salary of $100.00 per month. A Silentophone teacher is, at this time, wanted in Birmingham.

Competent Stenographers and Court Reporters are in demand throughout the country at salaries ranging from $75.00 to $200.00 per month. This is your opportunity to qualify for a position before the Fall and Winter business opens up.

Respectfully,
University of Silentophoning,
Scott Building,
Decatur, Alabama.

you—you don't like me very well do you, Theresa? Jerry's voice was pathetic.

Theresa's answer surprised her. "I think you are the sweetest, the most lovable girl I ever saw in my life. In fact, you're the only one I ever did see."

Jerry flushed deeply with surprise and pleasure. "You may not be an artist, but you're a heavenly fine kid. You're not going home, are you?"

"No, I'm not. I think not. I don't know what I am going to do." Theresa put the tray on the floor, and Jerry went downstairs.

Jerry expected quite confidently to hear from Rhoda, by telephone, at least, to make inquiry as to her safe arrival alone at that ghastly hour. But she neither telephoned nor came. And so, late in the afternoon, Jerry walked the six intervening blocks to her studio. The maid assured her that Miss La Faye was in, and sent her directly up, but although Jerry knocked twice, very smartly, there was no answer. She started down, but as the maid insisted that her friend was certainly in, she returned once more, and used the heavy knocker to such good effect that after a time there came a muffled groan, a flinging about of covers, and presently the shuffling of soft-soled slippers toward the door.

It was a flushed and disheveled Rhoda who confronted her, her usually bright eyes swollen, inflamed and dull. Two grotesque kid corners, protruded stiffly over her left eye, while the rest of her bobbed hair dangled about her face in free disorder.

"Why didn't you do it all?" demanded Jerry quickly, her eyes on the bristling curls. "Why such partiality?" Following the direction of Jerry's eyes, Rhoda lifted a languid hand and felt vaguely about her forehead, coming to a sudden, electrical alertness as she felt the two corners. She ran to the mirror for a minute inspection.

"For heaven's sake," she wailed, "did I go like that to the party?" Jerry assured her she did not, and Rhoda sighed in great relief.

"Well, I don't know how it happened," she said, "and I don't care. Bertrande brought me home. Perhaps he did it for a joke. As long as I did not disgrace myself at the party, I don't care."

She tumbled upon the bed again, and Jerry sat down beside her. "Oh, such a head," moaned Rhoda, lifting her hands to her throbbing temples. "I swear every time I'll never do it again, and then I do."

Jerry took off her gloves, removed her hat, folded her coat nicely over the back of a chair, and went to work. She got out cups and saucers, measured coffee and water into the electric percolator, and connected the switch.

"You'd better have it black," she said, "but I'll take cream as usual." Encouraged by her gentle activity, Rhoda pulled a dressing-gown about her shoulders, bathed her flushed face, brushed out her tousled locks, and then drooped wearily upon the tumbled couch once more.

"We didn't come home until six o'clock," she said. "We had breakfast before we left—ham and eggs and everything. I made the toast. Burned myself, too."

"Six o'clock! But, Rhoda, how can you work?" "Who's going to work? I told you yesterday I couldn't work today. That's why I finished the picture. Oh, such a head!"

"Well, of all the silly things," Jerry said, in her most pompously Prudence voice. "Work all night, or dance all night. It is plain intemperance, Rhoda. You ought to use a little judgment about things! No wonder you're a wreck."

Rhoda laughed feebly. "Now, Iowa," she protested teasingly. "There speaks the corn-fed baby!" Then she added soberly: "Did you enjoy it, Jerry? Every one liked you so much. They thought you were perfectly lovely, although discreet. Korzy said you were quite annoyed because he kissed you—at least he thought it was you. And Duane—"

"That isn't Greenwich, that's Brooklyn," objected Rhoda. "But anyhow we admit it. We do nothing by fractions. When we jazz, we jazz. But remember this, Old Mississippi. When we work, we work. I've slaved away every night but three in the last three months. The theater twice, the party once. If I want to jazz until morning—"

"It's nobody's business but your own," Jerry put in, laughing, as Rhoda hesitated.

"Right! Rush along the coffee, Angel-face. My merry-go-rounds are back-firing on me."

Jerry hastened to pour the coffee, and they drank a cup in silence, then another. With the third serving Jerry broke the silence.

"Rhoda, who is Francy? I haven't met her, have I?" "Francy? Oh, you mean Francy England. Well, she is Duane Allerton's new flame, since Kitty Karson got married. What did he say about her?"

"He didn't mention her. It was Aimee. She didn't say anything—just spoke of her."

"She's not really in our crowd, you know. She's one of the Batik Trailers."

"The Batik—"

"Um, you know. Batik Trailers—the idle rich—those who can't paint, can't sing, can't write—but like the atmosphere and move in to get the air. We have to provide entertainment for them. Sometimes it's china painting, sometimes weaving, or beadwork—right now it's batik. Heaven knows what next! It's the raison d'être for the Art Trailers."

"Art Trailers! That is what I am, I suppose, an Art Trailer."

"Oh, no, Jerry, you're a student. If you want to amuse yourself studying Art—"

"It's nobody's business but my own," Jerry finished promptly, when Rhoda hesitated again.

"Right!" Rhoda laughed, agreeing. Rhoda begged her to stay for dinner—promising to cook most delectable things on the grill, to take her out anywhere she liked, to go to the theater, generously profuse in her enticement. But Jerry would not be persuaded.

She said she had to go home and fix something for Theresa, who was looking wretchedly ill, who had no proper regard for food, or rest, or exercise, and who certainly required a strong coercive hand to force her into reason.

"Theresa's making heaps of money," Rhoda said surprisingly. "She's doing marvelously."

"Theresa!" "Yes, why not?"

"Well, you thought wrong. It isn't the money with people like Theresa—like all of us. It's that burning up inside—we can't help it. Don't try to know what I'm talking about, old Angel-face; the more you think about it the less you'll understand!"

It was the next morning when Jerry slipped softly upstairs with a breakfast tray that Theresa asked her diffidently, almost apologetically, if she would care to see a few of her "things."

"Oh, I should love to," Jerry cried, flushing with pleasure.

Theresa was vaguely surprised, a little troubled, at her eagerness. "If you wanted to see them, why didn't you ask me?"

For the first time in the weeks she had known Theresa, she really took time to do a thing quietly, deliberately and with comfortable ease. She spent the full morning with Jerry, showing her dozens of little sketches, unfinished bits of landscape, lovely heads, delicately draped figures with out number, discussing them mean-while with an impersonal, judicious interest that charmed and fascinated Jerry. She touched upon their beauties of composition and execution generously, but without personal warmth. And she pointed out their defects with a keen eye and an unsparring tongue and then she said:

"I have saved my best till the last, Jerry. This is my one passion, my darling and my adored."

It was typical of Theresa that she did not keep it on display, "her darling and adored," but packed away with tender care in a dark closet, obviously the one thing in her life that received her tender care. Jerry almost held her breath as Theresa brought it out, removed the protecting wrappers, and turned it about for her to see.

It was a cruel green ocean, lashing great waves into white foam, an ocean of blackening shadows, and shifting lights. At first glance, Jerry saw only the turbulence of a multitude of waters, and then, looking deeper, standing out with sharp incisiveness once she had discerned its presence, riding the highest, wildest wave of all, stretched the slim white body of a woman, triumphant white face up-raised, dominant white arms flung wide—a joyous, jubilant, fearless figure of youth, swept on the black waters, sprayed with the white.

Jerry cried out, enraptured.

"Theresa! Oh, Theresa! It is beautiful! It is the most—thrilling—thing I ever saw. It makes you feel so full of—freedom."

Theresa nodded, her dark eyes alight with pleasure. "Um, freedom. I've been working on it for years, Jerry. A thousand or more, I think. I used to spend the summer on the coast in Maine with my nurse—when I was a kid, you know. I adored the ocean. It is the only really free—really relentless—thing I ever saw. It knows no law but its own. Oh, yes, I know what scientists say about the moon, and the tides. No, no, what little moon riding the heavens could harness a fathomless ocean! I used to sit, like an ugly blackbird, on the highest rocks, and adore the ocean in a storm. A hundred times I went home drenched to the skin, soaked, but exalted with rapture, to be soundly whipped for my mischief, and put to bed in disgrace."

She paused, smiling at Jerry.

"Go on, go on," she begged feverishly. "Tell me."

"First, I suppose it was just a personal emotion—I wanted to ride the waves. I chafed at my bondage to solid, sordid earth. I thrilled myself to a rapture by fancying myself swept high on the topmost wave. And so before long—my thought a mother to the thing, I suppose—it really seemed to me I saw her, the Ocean Rider, a lovely, slim, white woman triumphant on the waves. I worshiped it. It was a god to me. I have only been able to work on it when the passion is hot upon me, so it has been a very slow thing. A dozen times, in a storm, I have gone off to the islands to do another bit on my Ocean Rider. It isn't right yet. The ocean is good enough, but the Rider—I haven't quite got it."

There was brooding discontent in Theresa's voice. "The light in her eyes—it's not right. I wonder, Jerry—"

Her voice took on a sudden wheedlingness Jerry had never heard in it.

"The Batik—"

"Um, you know. Batik Trailers—the idle rich—those who can't paint, can't sing, can't write—but like the atmosphere and move in to get the air. We have to provide entertainment for them. Sometimes it's china painting, sometimes weaving, or beadwork—right now it's batik. Heaven knows what next! It's the raison d'être for the Art Trailers."

Macks Pulling Away From Senators As Coveleskie Takes Defeat; Pirates Lose

The race of age and youth is beginning to tell on the world champions. Athletics are beginning to draw away from the Senators. The Washington club has put up a game fight and there is no reason for singing a funeral song just yet, but from the looks of things the Nats are slipping badly while the Mackmen have recovered from the midseason slump and are again winning ball games in the same flashy style that characterized early season play.

Stanley Coveleskie ran his total to 13 straight victories then he ran into the Chicago White Sox, "Hitless Wonders," they are called. Eddie Collins and his gang gathered just 18 hits of the veteran Pole while the Senators were suffering from shin splints in an effort to race around the sacks.

The Macks were busy at the time handing Detroit a shutout. Shutouts in the Tyger Lair are few, further proof of the rapid rate that Connie Mack has his hirelings traveling. Sam Gray was able to go the full route for the Macks and gather his 10th straight win of the year in addition to scoring his fourth shutout.

Over in the National the Giants took a new lease on life when they captured a single frasca from the Cubs-Pittsburg was losing to Boston at the time. Vic Aldridge was unable to hem the hammerings of the Boston clan and 11 hits did away with that star of other days. Genewich was traveling at a full gait and stopped the Pirates dead in their tracks with eight safeties.

Cincinnati became firmly entrenched in third place with a victory over Philadelphia making their sixth straight. The Dodgers took another flop to the rosin when St. Louis administered a sleeping portion 5-2.

In the Southern league Atlanta seems to be well underway and nearing the leading Pels who have been faltering for the past two weeks. Birmingham couldn't lose to Chattanooga yesterday the game was called off on account of wet grounds. Nashville lost to the Crackers 8-4. Memphis shutout New Orleans 8-0 when Otto Merz gave up four hits to the pace setters. Mobile outdistanced Little Rock 5-4.

12 Years Ago From The Daily of TODAY

July 31, 1913

A letter from Mr. and Mrs. George A. Nelson, mailed on board the steamer California July 27, states that they have sighted land off New York and that they will arrive in Decatur today.

W. B. Newsom, 308 5th avenue west, presented this office with as fine a box of peaches as ever were grown.

Sam Malone, one of the most popular insurance men who ever lived here, expects to visit his old home in October.

Mr. and Mrs. Binford A. Turner are visiting friends in Athens.

Mrs. S. M. Thompson returned from Chattanooga today where she was called by the very serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Nelson.

Misses Helen and Kathleen Almon left today for a ten-day visit to friends in the "Dimple of the Universe," Columbia, Tenn.

A DAILY PRAYER—May we know that divine power that moves us to forgive.

TALK IS CHEAP WHEN THE DOLLAR IS IN THE COUNTING HOUSE

Some of America's richest men are evidently deciding to lay aside the cares of money making, the responsibility is too great. They have amassed great fortunes and now desire to get out from under the burden of holding the sack wherein is deposited the filthy dust that they find has become a burden rather than a joy. In the jargon of the comic strip artists, "That's a lot of bologna" — "Applesauce."

The Tuscaloosa News takes middle ground with the rich and the poor alike and offers comment on the situation in which O. P. Van Sweringen philosophizes:

"O. P. Van Sweringen, rising railroad magnate, in testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission, gives a bit of philosophy hardly expected in such a connection:

"Dollars don't have the attraction for me they have for some people," he says. "I have enough of them. I can take care of myself. I am not sure whether to be rich is to be poor, or to be poor is to be rich."

"Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel company, said something to the same effect once, suggesting that after a person gets all the money he can use personally, the rest doesn't mean much, and then it is plans and purposes he is interested in, not dollars.

"The Rockefeller family plainly look upon their vast fortunes as responsibilities rather than personal blessings. "Oh, it's easy enough for them to talk like that! the poor man says.

"Each sees the other's blessings and overlooks the other's burdens.

"As a matter of fact, there is usually far less difference between the life of the rich man and the poor man than is indicated by their outward circumstances. Fundamentally they live, work, play, enjoy and suffer pretty much the same. Happiness is a matter of temperament and health rather than money or environment."

Yes they can talk a great deal about the burden of counting figures in the bank balance, but like the poor man, we believe that tidings of great joy could be heard throughout this section of the globe if we could assume that responsibility upon arising in the morning. Of course the rich man has his troubles and his difficulties, but he does not wonder where money is coming from to educate his children, pay the house rent, purchase the food stores, taxes, charities and everything else that the ordinary man needs. We rather side with the poor man that the rich fellow's lot is not near so burdensome. That may be, because we have never tried the other side of life.

BETTER MOVIE WEEK RECEIVES THE ENDORSEMENT OF CALVIN COOLIDGE

Better Movie Week will be observed over the nation beginning August 3rd, the local playhouse enter into the spirit of the week in an honest endeavor to give the people what they believe to be a better class of entertainment.

Pictures can have a vast influence on people. Thousands of habits of the theatre admit that the acting in the silent world is just as effective as the acting that top price is paid for to see. The movies are rapidly moving toward accepting the opportunity which they have over the "speaking," or legitimate stage. The movie has the advantage of the setting, we go into the movie and see people moving in real life, real people in ordinary life, people life-like and very much like our next door neighbor or even ourselves. That is the immense appeal of the movie of today.

The acting is improving as the years go on and productions of the silver screen increase.

There is but one feature that is a draw-back in the movie world of today and that is the appeal to the sensational type of drama. A great many producers lean toward the unreal in setting and in life. Naturally the influence on the uneducated mind is not what might be termed as good. Elaborate settings for "wild" parties, parties which are just as fantastic as the fairy tales that we enjoyed reading when we were children. That is the weak spot in the movie world of today.

Greater Movie Week may mean that the theatres are going to attempt to give a better type of show. The public is fast tiring of the eternal triangle and the sex problem plays whether they be overdone or true to the life that is depicted. The moving picture producers have an excellent opportunity here for advancement. English audiences have voiced an opinion against such plays by refusing to pay an admission to see them. American audiences can do the same if they really desire that the sex play must go.

We hope that Greater Movie Season will be all that the producers have hoped for, all that Calvin Coolidge and Will S. Hays wish for, a finer and higher type of entertainment appealing to the clean and the upbuilding of youthful and older minds alike.

DIogenES CAN BLOW OUT HIS LANTERN AN HONEST MAN HAS BEEN FOUND

The ancient and tottering figure of Greek mythology can now cast aside his squeaking and flickering lantern, rusty with age and weather and at last straggle home for rest, an honest man has been located, so has his wife. Though beating Father Time to the total of 157 years between them, these good people from the Hoosier state, made famous by the Wabash river song and the pleas of radio broadcasting stations to help the stricken areas, aver that there were, "No good old days." These folks bring the truth to light and make our grandparents seek the quietude of aloofness in an effort to escape the finger of accusation pointing at them and questioning their veracity.

Traitors in camp of the older generation. Mr. and Mrs. James S. Fisher celebrating their sixtieth wedding anniversary ask that the age of "aeroplanes, automobiles, electricity and newspapers remain." They do not care to return to the discomforts of the old days so often depicted by our grandparents as being gala occasions when they went to the barn on a chilly November morning to hitch old Dobbin to the sleigh.

Fisher declared that he wanted no more of "wading through mud and struggling constantly to win an existence from an undeveloped country."

There is much truth in the statement of this man who has seen both the beginning and the snowfall of life. He knows that the old days supplied few comforts in comparison with the modern day luxuries and conveniences. Today may be the age of specialization and competition but today is certainly not the age of mud roads and ox carts, our facilities have been increased although it seems that day by day, to the average man, that a livelihood becomes a greater problem.

Old timers will find little solace in the statement of these people who lived in their same-age. The former generation has a way of telling the present generation how to live and confiding that the future generation is going to the dogs through the invention and institution of modern methods of earning and living.

At heart the people of today are just as deeply religious, just as profoundly reverent as the people of yesterday and as long as people recognize and believe in a Superior Being there is little to fear, for their conscience will tell them the difference in right and wrong. That question seems to worry the past generation a great deal more anyhow than the dangers of modernization of industry and the introduction of the age of specialization.

INDIAN'S NEWS MAY BE OF VALUE TO SOME NATIONS, BUT NOT TO THE U. S.

John Jesudason Cornelius is a British Indian professor of philosophy at Lucknow University, which fact conveys little meaning to us or to anyone else outside of his immediate circle of friends. What the professor has to say though is of much more interest to us.

Professor Cornelius comes forward with the sparkling bit of information to the effect that the Eastern hemisphere is mentally armed against the nations of the Western world. He declared that the East is mentally armed against the nations of the West, have confidence in their spiritual strength and are prepared to oppose the strongest nations of the world for the sake of their rights even if in the struggle they dig their own graves.

Very invigorating line of thought. Immediately we see hoards of orientals and brown men combined in an effort to erase the white race from the face of the globe, because the white man is enjoying supremacy, because the white man has taken advantage of the opportunities offered and has established himself. That is where the theory of evolution fails to stand up to all that Darwin claimed for the eastern world is far more densely populated than the western half of the globe. Darwin declared this world to be one evolution after another with the strongest overwhelming and taking the life of the weak.

But the discussion of the theory of evolution is not at hand in the question of race wars. This same Indian believes that the United States is pulling away from the standards which were set by the founders of this government and allowing the greed that has been a part of the European nations for centuries to creep in. Professor Cornelius has no fact to back his statement. Not a single foot of land has the United States asked even though nations have been conquered that owned vast amounts of land far from their own shores. What the United States has acquired in territorial gain she has bought and paid for in United States gold. Furthermore, the United States has been and remains the benevolent nation of the world, helping other nations in time of famine, aiding in reconstruction periods, enlightening in both religious and educational circles.

Then why should Dr. Cornelius give voice to so hollow an opinion? Why should he place this nation on a par with greedy nations who seek to destroy that they might gain? It seems that the immense amount of good that the United States has done the world over would have some influence on the mind of a man, particularly the mind of a thinker and a student who surely knows the history of the world. It is indeed unfortunate that the professor has been led around with a ring in his nose, a subject of the British government and seen some of the cruelties that must be practiced in time of war to keep a warlike nation in submission. We cannot help but admire the spirit of freedom in the heart of the man for he undoubtedly loves India and wants freedom for his nation as every American wants freedom to remain an institution in the United States, but he certainly is off on the wrong foot if he thinks that America is to be looked upon in any such light.

America has always been known as the nation which has looked upon the great and the small alike, giving justice where justice was due and standing as an impartial judge in the center between the forces of the east and the forces of the west. America will continue to serve in her capacity attempting to give the best to other nations that can be obtained in a political sense, protecting her international rights against the arms of any nation on the earth, going forward in a righteous endeavor to keep this land of ours free from foreign incumbrance.

the industrial kings is to make industry and work attractive, not to squeeze men down to the lowest wage scale and drive them the longest possible number of hours.

THERE is plenty of wealth below and above the ground and in the brain of man to provide richly and generously for the entire human race. But as yet intelligence is content when it can get too much for itself, and willing to get by forcing others to take too little.

WALL STREET remembers W. J. Bryan and a shock like that of a conger eel that he once administered to the stock ticker.

It was in July, 1896, and Bryan's "cross of gold" speech was the shock it nominated Bryan for the presidency and knocked all the important stocks in Wall street down 10 to 15 points.

The recent nomination of Mr. Davis did not have that effect.

SENATOR NORRIS will fight to retain the national taxes on inherited wealth, now very heavy.

President Coolidge believes those taxes should be abolished or greatly modified.

YOU can attack or support inheritance taxation convincingly. You may say that a great fortune which a widow and children can inherit only because the government protects them in their rights should pay something for the protection.

Or you can say that the tax should be put on the strong man in his life while he is working and not put on his coffin or children.

THE important thing to do that every man should do his best work And the men worth having will work five times as hard as he would otherwise to provide for his children and mother. To discourage that is not a good idea.

GLADSTONE'S two sons call "liar, coward and fool" a Captain Pier Wright, who writes indecently about their father, saying it was his, Gladstone's hamit "in public to speak the language of the highest and strictest principle, and in private to pursue and possess every sort of woman."

WHY Gladstone's sons should notice the statement of a "liar, coward and fool" is not clear.

This writer used to see Gladstone every day in the fighting prime of his old age, and can testify that Gladstone had little time for foolishness.

Every night he sat on the opposite bench as late as 5 o'clock in the morning, in the house of commons.

And in the ladies' gallery, where the women sat, hidden from sight by heavy screen, that beauty might not distract law-makers, there sat, when the weather was bad, Mr. Gladstone's aged wife, staying in the house as long as he did.

She met him at the entrance, under the clock tower, with a heavy woolen muffler, wrapped it around his neck and took him home.

If there ever was a man whose memory even a modern writer should respect, it is William E. Gladstone, of whom it was truly said that "his heart was ever with the weak and miserable poor."

SYNOPSIS PART ONE

CHAPTER I—At a merry party in the studio apartment of Carter Blake, in New York, Jerry Harner, Prudence's daughter, meets Duane Allerton, a wealthy lawyer, who becomes slightly intoxicated, and Jerry, resenting his assumption of familiarity, leaves the party abruptly.

CHAPTER II—The story turns to Jerry's childhood and youth at her home in Des Moines. Only child of a wealthy father, when she is twenty she feels the call of art, and her parents, with some misgivings, agree to her going to New York to study.

CHAPTER III—In New York Jerry makes her home with a Mrs. Delaney ("Mimi"), an actress, who, with Theresa, a painter, occupies the house. Jerry takes an immediate liking to Theresa, and the two become fast friends.

All Over Alabama

The paving of the road from Sheffield to Wilson Dam in the near future is expected to result from a movement that has been launched by the civic clubs of Sheffield and Tusculumbia.

A movement is on foot at Andalusia for the re-establishment of a chamber of commerce for that city, as a result of the effort of several business men.

The R. O. T. C. unit from the Presbyterian college of South Carolina has been adjudged the best senior unit from any of the colleges that sent men to the camp, which was held at Camp McClellan.

The first bale of cotton reported for Alabama was sent to Montgomery from Abbeville last week. The cotton brought 32 1-2 cents a pound.

A $40,000 brick building will be erected in Montgomery in the near future it has been announced.

THE SILENTO-STENOGRAPHER

Only Twenty Days Training Required
To Do The Work of a Stenographer.

Teachers At Good Salaries Wanted
For New Schools.

The University of Silentophoning will open at Decatur, Alabama, August 10, 1925, to teach a new system, which qualifies one to do the work of an efficient stenographer in twenty days without the use of shorthand.

This should be good news to those who anticipate taking up the work of a stenographer on account of the short time required to learn the system. It will do away with the long, weary months of shorthand study to be a stenographer, and the great expense.

The President of the University, Mr. William Orr, is the Official Court Reporter of Morgan, Madison, Cullman and Limestone counties, Alabama, under Judge Ocoela Kyle, of Decatur, and uses the Silentophone system to report all law suits, court charges, and speeches to the exclusion of shorthand. Mr. Orr will personally instruct the August class.

No shorthand system has ever been devised as inexpensive and which may be learned in so short a time as the Silentophone system.

It is our purpose to select from the August Graduating Class several teachers for contemplated schools. This is the first of a chain of universities we expect to establish in cities where five pupils may be obtained. Each of these teachers will be paid a salary of $100.00 per month. A Silentophone teacher is, at this time, wanted in Birmingham.

Competent Stenographers and Court Reporters are in demand throughout the country at salaries ranging from $75.00 to $200.00 per month. This is your opportunity to qualify for a position before the Fall and Winter business opens up.

Respectfully,
University of Silentophoning,
Scott Building,
Adv. 31-17, Decatur, Alabama.

you—you don't like me very well do you, Theresa? Jerry's voice was pathetic.

Jerry flushed deeply with surprise and pleasure.

"You may not be an artist, but you're a heavenly fine kid. You're not going home, are you?"

"No, no. I'm not. I think not. I don't know what I am going to do."

Theresa put the tray on the floor, and Jerry went downstairs.

Jerry expected quite confidently to hear from Rhoda, by telephone at least, to make inquiry as to her safe arrival alone at that ghastly hour. But she neither telephoned nor came. And so, late in the afternoon, Jerry walked the six intervening blocks to her studio.

The maid assured her that Miss La Faye was in, and sent her directly up, but although Jerry knocked twice, very smartly, there was no answer. She started down, but as the maid insisted that her friend was certainly in, she returned once more, and used the heavy knocker to such good effect that after a time there came a muffled groan, a flinging about of covers, and presently the shuffling of soft-soled slippers toward the door.

It was a flushed and disheveled Rhoda who confronted her, her usually bright eyes swollen, inflamed and dull. Two grotesque kid curlers, protruded stiffly over her left eye, while the rest of her bobbed hair dangled about her face in free disorder.

"Why didn't you do it all?" demanded Jerry quickly, her eyes on the bristling curlers. "Why such partiality?"

Following the direction of Jerry's eyes, Rhoda lifted a languid hand and felt vaguely about her forehead, coming to a sudden, electrical alertness as she felt the two curlers. She ran to the mirror for a minute inspection.

"For heaven's sake," she wailed, "did I go like that to the party?"

Jerry assured her she did not, and Rhoda sighed in great relief.

"Well, I don't know how it happened," she said, "and I don't care. Bertrande brought me home. Perhaps he did it for a joke. As long as I did not disgrace myself at the party, I don't care."

She tumbled upon the bed again, and Jerry sat down beside her.

"Oh, such a head," moaned Rhoda, lifting her hands to her throbbing temples. "I swear every time I'll never do it again, and then I do."

Jerry took off her gloves, removed her hat, folded her coat nicely over the back of a chair, and went to work. She got out cups and saucers, measured coffee and water into the electric percolator, and connected the switch.

"You'd better have it black," she said, "but I'll take cream as usual."

Encouraged by her gentle activity, Rhoda pulled a dressing-gown about her shoulders, bathed her flushed face, brushed out her tousled locks, and then drooped wearily upon the tumbled couch once more.

"We didn't come home until six o'clock," she said. "We had breakfast before we left—ham and eggs and everything. I made the toast. Burned myself, too."

"Six o'clock! But, Rhoda, how can you work?"

"Who's going to work? I told you yesterday I couldn't work today. That's why I finished the picture. Oh, such a head!"

"Well, of all the silly things," Jerry said, in her most pompously Prudence voice. "Work all night, or dance all night, or—It is plain intemperance, Rhoda. You ought to use a little judgment about things! No wonder you're a wreck."

Rhoda laughed feebly. "Now, Iowa," she protested teasingly. "There speaks the corn-fed baby!" Then she added soberly: "Did you enjoy it, Jerry? Every one liked you so much. They thought you were perfectly lovely, although discreet. Korzy said you were quite annoyed because he kissed you—at least he thought it was you. And Duane—"

"That isn't Greenwich, that's Brooklyn," objected Rhoda. "But anyhow we admit it. We do nothing by fractions. When we jazz, we jazz. But remember this, Old Mississippi. When we work, we work. I've slaved away every night but three in the last three months. The theater twice, the party once. If I want to jazz until morning—"

"It's nobody's business but your own," Jerry put in, laughing, as Rhoda hesitated.

"Right! Rush along the coffee, Angel-face. My merry-go-rounds are back-firing on me."

Jerry hastened to pour the coffee, and they drank a cup in silence, then another. With the third serving Jerry broke the silence.

"Rhoda, who is Francy? I haven't met her, have I?"

"Francy? Oh, you mean Francy England. Well, she is Duane Allerton's new flame, since Kitty Karson got married. What did he say about her?"

"He didn't mention her. It was Almeda. She didn't say anything—just spoke of her."

"She's not really in our crowd, you know. She's one of the Batik Trailers."

"The Batik—"

"Um, you know. Batik Trailers—the idle rich—those who can't paint, can't sing, can't write—but like the atmosphere and move in to get the air. We have to provide entertainment for them. Sometimes it's china painting, sometimes weaving, or beadwork; right now it's batik. Heaven knows what next! It's the raison d'être for the Art Trailers."

"Art Trailers! That is what I am, I suppose, an Art Trailer?"

"Oh, no, Jerry, you're a student. If you want to amuse yourself studying Art—"

"It's nobody's business but my own," Jerry finished promptly, when Rhoda hesitated again.

"Right!" Rhoda laughed, agreeing. Rhoda begged her to stay for dinner—promising to cook most delectable things on the grill, to take her out anywhere she liked, to go to the theater, generously profuse in her enticement.

But Jerry would not be persuaded. She said she had to go home and fix something for Theresa, who was looking wretchedly ill, who had no proper regard for food, or rest, or exercise, and who certainly required a strong coercive hand to force her into reason.

"Theresa's making heaps of money," Rhoda said surprisingly. "She's doing marvelously."

"Theresa!"

"Yes, why not?"

"Well, you thought wrong. It isn't the money with people like Theresa—like all of us. It's that burning up inside—we can't help it. Don't try to know what I'm talking about, old Angel-face; the more you think about it the less you'll understand!"

It was the next morning when Jerry slipped softly upstairs with a breakfast tray that Theresa asked her diffidently, almost apologetically, if she would care to see a few of her "things."

"Oh, I should love to," Jerry cried, flushing with pleasure.

Theresa was vaguely surprised, a little troubled, at her eagerness. "If you wanted to see them, why didn't you ask me?"

For the first time in the weeks she had known Theresa, she really took time to do a thing quietly, deliberately and with comfortable easiness. She spent the full morning with Jerry, showing her dozens of little sketches, unfinished bits of landscape, lovely heads, delicately draped figures without number, discussing them meanwhile with an impersonal, judicious interest that charmed and fascinated Jerry. She touched upon their beauties of composition and execution generously, but without personal warmth. And she pointed out their defects with a keen eye and an unsparring tongue. And then she said:

It was typical of Theresa that she did not keep it on display, "her darling and adored," but packed away with tender care in a dark closet, obviously the one thing in her life that received her tender care. Jerry almost held her breath as Theresa brought it out, removed the protecting wrappers, and turned it about for her to see.

It was a cruel green ocean, lashing great waves into white foam, an ocean of blackening shadows, and shifting lights. At first glance, Jerry saw only the turbulence of a multitude of waters, and then, looking deeper, standing out with sharp incisiveness once she had discerned its presence, riding the highest, wildest wave of all, stretched the slim white body of a woman, triumphant white face upraised, dominant white arms flung wide—a joyous, jubilant, fearless figure of youth, swept on the black waters, sprayed with the white.

Jerry cried out, enraptured.

"Theresa! Oh, Theresa! It is beautiful! It is the most—thrilling—thing I ever saw. It makes you feel so full of—freedom!"

Theresa nodded, her dark eyes alight with pleasure. "Um, freedom. I've been working on it for years, Jerry. A thousand or more, I think. I used to spend the summer on the coast in Maine with my nurse—when I was a kid, you know. I adored the ocean. It is the only really free—really relentless—thing I ever saw. It knows no law but its own. Oh, yes, I know what scientists say about the moon, and the tides. No, no, what little moon riding the heavens could harness a fathomless ocean! I used to sit, like an ugly blackbird, on the highest rocks, and adore the ocean in a storm. A hundred times I went home drenched to the skin, soaked, but exalted with rapture, to be soundly whipped for my mischief, and put to bed in disgrace."

She paused, smiling at Jerry.

"Go on, go on," she begged feverishly. "Tell me."

"First, I suppose it was just a personal emotion—I wanted to ride the waves. I chafed at my bondage to solid, sordid life. I thrilled myself to a rapture by fancying myself swept high on the topmost wave. And so before long—my thought a mother to the thing, I suppose—it really seemed to me I saw her, the Ocean Rider, a lovely, slim, white woman triumphant on the waves. I worshiped it. It was a god to me. I have only been able to work on it when the passion is hot upon me, so it has been a very slow thing. A dozen times, in a storm, I have gone off to the islands to do another bit on my Ocean Rider. It isn't right yet. The ocean is good enough, but the Rider—I haven't quite got it."

Theresa was brooding discontent in Theresa's voice. "The light in her eyes—it's not right. I wonder, Jerry—"

Her voice took on a sudden wheedle-someness Jerry had never heard in it

Macks Pulling Away From Senators As Coveleskie Takes Defeat; Pirates Lose

The race of age and youth is beginning to tell on the world champions. Athletics are beginning to draw away from the Senators. The Washington club has put up a game fight and there is no reason for singing a funeral song just yet, but from the looks of things the Nats are slipping badly while the Mackmen have recovered from the midseason slump and are again winning ball games in the same flashy style that characterized early season play.

Stanley Coveleskie ran his total to 13 straight victories then he ran into the Chicago White Sox. "Hitless Wonders," they are called. Eddie Collins and his gang gathered just 18 hits of the veteran Polo while the Senators were suffering from shin splints in an effort to race around the sacks.

The Macks were busy at the time handing Detroit a shutout. Shutouts in the Tiger Lair are few, further proof of the rapid rate that Connie Mack has his hirelings traveling. Sam Gray was able to go the full route for the Macks and gather his 10th straight win of the year in addition to scoring his fourth shutout.

Over in the National the Giants took a new lease on life when they captured a single fraeze from the Cubs Pittsburgh was losing to Boston at the time. Vic Aldridge was unable to hem the hammerings of the Boston clan and 11 hits did away with that star of other days. Genewich was traveling at a full gait and stopped the Pirates dead in their tracks with eight safeties.

Cincinnati became firmly entrenched in third place with a victory over Philadelphia making their sixth straight. The Dodgers took another flop to the rosin when St. Louis administered a sleeping portion 5-2.

In the Southern league Atlanta seems to be well underway and nearing the leading Pels who have been faltering for the past two weeks. Birmingham couldn't lose to Chattanooga yesterday the game was called off on account of wet grounds. Nashville lost to the Crackers 8-4. Memphis shutout New Orleans 8-0 when Otto Merz gave up four hits to the pace setters. Mobile outdistanced Little Rock 5-4.

Why They Parted

"I was down with pain in my right side which at times almost crazed me. Most all of the doctors said operation. But what I want to tell you is the pain disappeared with the first dose of your medicine and I never see any since. Mayr's Wonderful Remedy has the right name—gas, sour stomach and dyspepsia have left too." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At all druggists.—Advt.

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DIAR ANNIE LAURIE:
Is it proper to wear a hat to a wedding at 6:30? The wedding is to be followed by a reception.
Is 6:30 considered an afternoon or an evening wedding?

SALLY:
SALLY: If you wear evening clothes at the wedding, then, of course, it is not necessary to wear a hat. But if you will wear an afternoon dress or a semi-evening dress, then a large, soft hat will be most appropriate.
A wedding held at 6:30 in the evening is not considered an afternoon ceremony.

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl still in my teens and deep in love with a young man two years older than myself. We fell out with each other and his and my brother had a fight. Please tell me how to win his friendship again.

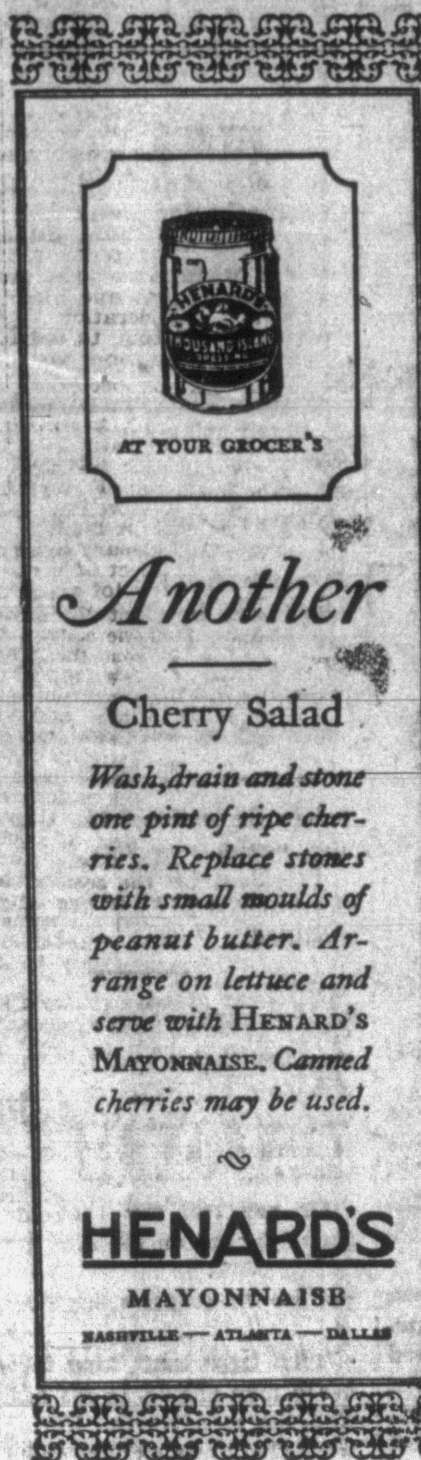

I have been married and have a living husband. He has been married and has a living wife. Please give me your advice.

BOBBED HAIR.

My dear, if you care for this man and he cares for you there is no reason why the difficulty between your own brother and his should stand between you. You say that you both have been married. Be sure that you are free from a legal point of view for unless you are there may be a great deal of talk directed against you. If you love this man it is proper that you write him if you wish and explain that you would like his friendship.

Columbus W. Kyle Called By Death

Columbus W. Kyle, aged 72 years, died at 11:30 o'clock Thursday at his home on the Somerville pike, near Flint creek. He is survived by his wife and three daughters, Mrs. S. C. Thompson, Mrs. T. R. Grantland and Miss Cora Kyle.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday at ten o'clock at the Kyle family cemetery by Rev. James Francis.

Rev. Olive Will Conduct Revival

Rev. E. Floyd Olive, pastor of the Southside Baptist church, will leave Sunday for Florence, where he will conduct a three weeks revival at the Central Baptist church, of that city.

Rev. Olive will fill his pulpit here Sunday morning, motoring to Florence Sunday evening to preach his initial sermon of the revival. He was pastor of the Central Baptist church of Florence, at one time, and elaborate plans have been made for his return during the revival.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THERE has been a very interesting voting contest over the best liked dish. My friends of the United Restaurant Owners' Association have been trying to find out what New York likes best to eat.

City folks are thought to have exotic tastes, but why should they? Most of the city folks I know come from the country. If they were not born in tiny villages they were born on farms, as I was. At bottom they have plain tastes. It is that they are human. Their needs and impulses are like everybody else's. They may repeat the words of Shylock.
"If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you prick us, do we not bleed?" So why need we be surprised if the effete New Yorkers confess they best like the old fashioned and plebeian dish of corned beef and cabbage?

It is interesting that the majority of the restaurant patrons should agree upon this particular dish. From the good standpoint no better selection could be made. It is remarkably well balanced in its ingredients. Along with the proteins and fats, are the essential vitamins and the "roughage" which the fibres of the cabbage gives.

But let us writers on foods and health not flatter ourselves that this dish was chosen because of its chemical and physical composition. In the language of one of the editorial writers: "It must have been its flavor, however, that won the day for corned beef and cabbage. The selection of foods is not so sickly o'er with the pale cast of thought that protein and vitamins are taken into consideration when a hungry man is about to order. That popular combination won on its merits."

It is too bad that foods are not selected on their merits. I wish the average man knew more about proteins, vitamins, carbohydrates and the minerals he must have to live and thrive. Everybody despises a man or a woman who is always tossing about foods and germs. But it isn't necessary to become a "crank" on the subject of proper eating. One can know a lot about foods and not stop to count the calories of every dish. But one cannot be guaranteed health without the reason's application of a few simple rules of eating.

One of the reasons why some families are strong and vigorous while others are weak and anemic, is because the favorite dishes and their proportions have been handed down from one generation to another. If away back yonder there was a woman who knew how to cook and how to select good foods, she taught her daughter the secrets and developed the appetite in her sons which made them demand the same dishes. The children and grandchildren of such a woman are likely to be husky and vigorous.

Everybody should know enough about foods to order dishes for their food values as well as for their flavor.

Answers to Health Queries THANK YOU, Q.—I am in very poor health and easily exhausted.
Also have a slight temperature at times. What would you advise?
Would nervousness cause the latter condition?
A.—Have a thorough examination.

Q.—What will keep my two-year-old child's face from tanning from wind and sun?
A.—How can I reduce my weight?
A.—Have the child wear a broad, brimmed hat when out in the sun.
If the skin burns easily, apply a thin coating of cold cream before going out-of-doors.

Q.—Restrict your diet as regards sweets and starches and take plenty of outdoor exercise. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Q.—What should a boy of 15, 5 feet 5 inches tall, weigh?
A.—What exercise will develop the wrist and forearm?
A.—Will graham crackers act as a body-builder?

A.—You should weigh about 155 2.—Any exercise which involves the muscles of these parts should bring about results. Playing tennis, rowing, handling Indian clubs.

Q.—Will graham crackers be considered nourishing, but are not usually considered body-building.

S. C. Q.—What is the cause of a coated tongue?
A.—This is usually due to poor intestinal elimination. Watch the diet, and be sure that the intestines function regularly every day. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your
question.

2 MILES WORK YET BIDS TO BE OPENED ON PRICEVILLE ROAD SATURDAY AT THREE

Rapid Advance Has Been Made In Past
Two Weeks

Working toward the completion of the Priceville-Somerville road before the coming of the winter season, Captain R. A. Burleson states that the advance made in the past two weeks has been made thus far, Captain Burleson is in charge of the improvement of the road way which has been underway for sometime with the crews of Burleson and Finn.

Completion of this stretch of roadway will mean that people from the east and southeast sections of the county will be able to travel to these cities at all parts of the year. The road at the present time is being covered with a water bound macadam type of paving with the probability that further improvements are contemplated later.

This stretch of roadway will greatly increase the transportation facility of the entire end of the county with a full circle of roadway being established among the cities and towns of the entire section of the county.

Esteemed Citizen 82 Years of Age — a Druggist for Past
50 Years — Recommends Great Stomach Remedy, Herb Juice, to Others.

"I have been a druggist for the past fifty years," stated A. T. Bes-sley, 809 South Fifth street, Nashville, Tenn., and during this time," continued Mr. Bessley, "I have tried many different kinds of remedies for stomach trouble, and I find that Herb Juice is superior to them all. Before I started taking this splendid medicine I was in a general run-down condition; was bothered with pains in my stomach and sides and also was constipated, digestive organs did not function properly, I was so nervous and restless at night I could hardly get enough sleep. Herb Juice set me right. It relieved me of these troubles and now I am feeling fine for a man 82 years old. I gained 20 pounds on four bottles and I believe Herb Juice is the best medicine on the market today for stomach troubles. I gladly recommend its use to others that they may take it and be benefitted by its use."

The foregoing statement, made by Mr. Bessley, one of Nashville's most prominent druggists and esteemed citizen's, is one among thousands that are coming to the Herb Juice laboratories telling of the worth of this great nature remedy in the treatment of gas stomach, constipation, indiges-

Success of St. Joseph's G. F. P.
Proves That Confidence Which Girls and Women Are Placing In This Wonderful Medicine Is Not Misplaced.

Hardly a day passes now without many reports of astonishing results from the use of the famous medicine known as St. Joseph's G. F. P., by women all over the south since its introduction here.

Girls and women who had been trying first one thing then another to rid themselves of the pain, irregularity, nervousness, irritability, loss of appetite, undernourishment and lack of normal weight which catarrh of their delicate generative organ makes them endure, are learning now and more every day that St. Joseph's G. F. P. is the medicine they should have had at the first sign of their trouble.

"We are indeed gratified to see such overwhelming enthusiasm among girl and women here about G. F. P.," say the representative of the discoverer here. "It is really no more than we expected because we have seen the results it brings about for women who had been going along month after month in actual misery, without being able to get any relief scarcely at all."

"We do not believe that we are overestimating the success of G. F. P.
when we say that we are confident more than a hundred thousand girl and women are calling at their drug stores this week in many cities across this part of the country, getting St. Joseph's G. F. P."

The South's Greatest Market

Smith-Meadow Supply Co., Inc., Gives Service

Service that merits your business is the slogan with the Smith-Meadow Supply Company, Inc., mill, mine, furnace, industrial supplies, warehouse and offices at 1639 Avenue A, Seventeenth Street, and the wonderful success of the firm during the two and a half years in business is credited to this.

B. B. Smith is president, and Bert Meadow, vice president and secretary.
Supplies for mine, mill and factory, furnace and general industrial operations are carried in stock, the present warehouse with 4,500 feet of floor space to be added to shortly, architects now working out plans for an additional warehouse, the growth of the business warrants this.
The personal touch to the business as given by the officers of the firm is accountable for the wonderful success that has been maintained, as well as the nature of the stock carried or the factories represented. The warehouse is so arranged that the needs can be supplied with little delay, the orders filled promptly and successfully. It is a rule at this place to give quick attention to all business, where possible to fill the orders and start shipment within a short time after receipt.
The firm represents some of the largest and most prominent manufacturers and retailers in the country and is prepared to meet any demand.

FOSTER-ALEXANDER HANDLE BUSINESS AS DEALING DIRECT

The Foster-Alexander Corporation, located at 106 South Twenty-First Street, reached by telephone Main 383, factory distributors, not only carry in warehouse stock for immediate delivery, but guarantee a service that speaks of dealing with factories direct. The corporation is in possession to give the same information and advice that would be obtained at factories. Organized two years ago for the purpose of supplying the trade with specialties in mill supply lines, the corporation has given attention to this service not alone in filling the want, but in filling it to all satisfaction, quickly and up to all specifications. The corporation is officered by V. C. Foster, president; W. W. Deal, vice president; and B. B. Alexander, secretary treasurer. Mr. Deal is a prominent lumber manufacturer and the other two officers give these extensive efforts to the corporation here.
The major lines carried include: Republic Rubber Company, of Youngstown, Ohio; Fairbanks Company, valves and unions, New York; Black and Dacker Manufacturing Company, electric drills, Baltimore, Md.; Garrett-Cullahan Company, Chicago, boiler treatment; L. & I. J. White Com-

Gorman-Gammill Seed Co. Has Fine Stock At Present

The Gorman-Gammill Seed Company, 243-30 Second Avenue, Birmingham, in the one place of business for 25 years, and having worked up a trade that extends throughout the South, a trade second to none, has a fine and complete stock. Quality has made the firm famous. Service has made the firm grow. J. B. Gorman, president and treasurer, has given the business his personal and direct attention, and to him is due the credit of the wonderful success.
The Gorman-Gammill Seed Company carries a full and complete line of seed, dairy supplies, poultry supplies, birds and bird supplies and shelf hardware. Its business aggregates around $150,000 per annum in the retail line alone. The catalog issued by the Gorman-Gammill Seed Company is of much interest. In the introductory Mr. Gorman reviews some of the past year's work of the farmers and the preparations for the future. In the 1925 issue he admonished the farmers not to make the mistake again this year of sacrificing other crops for cotton. Hay crops will always prove profitable to the Southern farmer for several reasons, good markets nearby, the climate being more favorable than most anywhere and a result at least two cuttings more than the North and West.
A few helpers to sell every year, a few porkers to market and eggs and chickens are also advised. A monthly calendar for farm operations in the South is included and then a full description of the seed, the machines for farming, dairying, etc.

Ala. Printing Has Complete Plant Here

The Alabama Printing Company, located at 111 South Twentieth Street, Birmingham, has one of the most complete plants to be found in the state. The company recently moved into its new location. The new plant was laid out by the American Type Foundry Company of Jersey City, and is so arranged as to reduce to a minimum the amount of time lost. The efficiency records of the plant show that it is considerably ahead of the average amount of output as compared with the output of plants of similar size in other cities.
The Alabama Printing Company is a partnership established by Robert Trechsel and Herbert L. Wood in 1918. Mr. Trechsel came to Birmingham in 1896 and has been in the printing business here ever since. Mr. Wood has been in the business in Birmingham for the past 25 years. Until 1919 they both were working for other plants or connected with other firms. In the stationery department, which is located on the first floor, the stock was doubled and a department of office furniture and equipment was added. This company has always specialized in the better grade of commercial work and ruled forms, and since moving into the new quarters has equipped the plant to handle direct mail advertising of the best grade in the most economical way. They are great believers in advertising—to use as well as to sell. They employ all mediums in putting over the efficiency of their own service. Both Mr. Trechsel and Mr. Wood have had wide experience in this business. Mr. Trechsel is a practical printer and is considered as well skilled in his art as any man in the city. Mr. Wood's specialty is the selling end of the business. He has had experience for almost 25 years, serving in every capacity that had to do with the selling of printing service. He is one of the best known salesmen in the city and numbers his friends by the thousands.
